

If Jones decides to re-enter baseball in this end of the country he will come back as a stockholder in some major club of which he will have the management. The former White Sox pilot will not consider any proposition which does not allow him to purchase a block of stock. The refusal of President Comiskey to part with a share in his club was what prompted Jones to quit in the first place. He tried to buy in at St. Louis and was blocked.

Having punctured these dreams we can turn over for another sleep beside the stove.

Federal League club owners were in session here today for the purpose of laying plans for the coming season. Reports will be made on fields secured. The election of a president may be postponed until after the National League meeting.

Doc White is going to leave the White Sox. The eminent southpaw conferred with Hap Hogan, boss of the Venice club of the Pacific Coast League yesterday, and at the close of the confab it was announced that arrangements had practically been completed for White to direct the Californians in their next league campaign.

Doc has wanted to be a manager for some time. He felt that he had outlived his usefulness as a big league pitcher, but could make good in the minors. President Comiskey gave him permission to find the best berth possible.

Before Doc can sign with Venice he must be released by the White Sox. This is a mere formality.

Good football weather is prevailing all over the country today for the first time this fall, and the mud and slippery field alibi can not be dragged out by the losers.

Up in Minneapolis, where Chicago meets Minnesota, the Gophers have been made favorites by a home crowd, as much because of their football ability as from local pride.

Chicago is placing its hopes on three men, Capt. Norgren, Gray and Peter Russell. Norgren's punting is better than anything aerial shown by Minnesota this year. Gray will find it hard to get away from the Gopher ends, but he must do it if Chicago is to have a chance. Russell is looked to for some points over the drop kick.

Minnesota in the middle of the line

has no edge on Chicago. Her ends are far superior to the Maroon wings, and the backfield is about a toss-up.

Pennsylvania will be awakened by the loss of Quarterback Brooks and an injury to Minds, which will keep the big fullback out of the game for
